Southill Park

Southill Park is one of the founder gardens which first opened its gates to NGS visitors in 1927. In the ornamental garden, there is a formal rose garden, a sunken garden and a pond. Directly in front of the main facade are four herbaceous flower beds designed by Tom Stuart-Smith. The parkland was designed by Lancelot 'Capability' Brown and a large conservatory houses the tropical collection.

Bedfordshire Gardens Trust

will be present with details about the history of the Southill Park landscape to enhance your visit

The Capability Brown landscape will not be accessible from the gardens open to the public but maps and information will be available
