Who were the clients? What did he advise?

What was completed? What remains?

Humphry Repton (1752-1818) was the leading landscape gardener of later Georgian England, combining 'the united powers of the landscape painter and the practical gardener'. He undertook more than 400 commissions during his 30-year career creating red leather-bound books for clients that contained 'before and after' plans, watercolours and visionary ideas for improvement.

For those interested in Gardens, Landscapes, Gardeners, Garden History and Bedfordshire.
